Clive farewell in a nickel of time. Kelmeny Fraser

CLIVE Palmer has narrowly avoided potential legal action holding him responsible for suspected environmental offences involving his north Queensland nickel refinery.

Company records show the federal MP and Palmer United Party founder resigned as a director of his company Queensland Nickel days before it is suspected to have breached Queensland environmental laws.

The act could spare Mr Palmer being held personally responsible for the company's actions if the Environment Department decides to lay charges, according to a legal expert, because he was not a director at the time.

Supreme Court documents, seen by The Courier-Mail, reveal the Environment Department is investigating the suspected environmental breaches from April, claiming the company failed to stop toxic water from spilling off its site during heavy rain.

The Courier-Mail revealed yesterday that the department was investigating if the incident could amount to charges. The suspected breaches occurred over several days from April 14.

Company records show Mr Palmer dated his resignation as the sole director of Queensland Nickel as April 5.

Queensland Nickel this week took legal action against the Environment Department and a senior inspector over the investigation.

University of Queensland environmental law professor Justine Bell said any potential prosecution over a breach of the Environmental Protection Act could lead to executive officers being held liable.

Dr Bell said the directors would have to prove they took reasonable steps to ensure the company complied with authorities or were not in a position to influence company conduct.

She said the Environment Department did not have to prove that the company's actions led to environmental harm to find it guilty of breaching section 430 (3) of the Act - the section the department officers are alleging was potentially breached.

Mr Palmer (pictured) has previously denied the claim and accused the Newman Government of spreading "misinformation".

The company has argued in court documents that chemicals were within regulated limits. It also stated the Environment Department had not taken into account climatic events, including heavy rainfall caused by tropical Cyclone Ita, and the fact that the nickel refinery had temporarily stopped operations at the time.

BHP sweetens spin-off, shuns Nickel West.

Amanda Saunders

BHP Billiton has made its $US15 billion ($16 billion) resources spin-off more attractive by including its metallurgical coalmines in NSW in the new company and dropping plans to include the struggling Nickel West project.

The mining giant revealed on Tuesday it would include its Illawarra metallurgical coal business in NSW, but it has surprised the market by hanging onto its thermal coal assets in the state's Hunter Valley.

It also posted a $US13.4 billion underlying profit for 2013-14, and disappointed the market with the absence of a buyback or special dividend.

BHP chief Andrew Mackenzie said Nickel West was "neither a good fit with BHP Billiton nor newco", citing its "maturity and complexity".

BHP will push on with its sales process for Nickel West, which has so far struggled to lure bidders.

The BHP boss said Illawarra had been included "purely on the basis of its scale". But he noted it was a "top asset" within its industry.

By including its Illawarra coal unit, BHP has given the spin-off the headline "hero" asset it needs to generate investor interest in a new mid-tier resources company.

UBS analyst Glyn Lawcock says Illawarra was likely included because it is not a long-life operation, unlike Queensland and Hunter Valley coal.

"If you look at what they've kept, it's all the big-scale, long-life assets," he says.

As flagged by The Australian Financial Review, BHP will install its chief financial officer Graham Kerr as the new group's inaugural chief executive, and its longest-serving director, David Crawford will take the chair. Board members will, in the main, be sought from outside BHP.

The new company will be based in Perth, due to the geographic spread of the assets, and BHP will issue the new company to all shareholders.

Both sets of shareholders, in Australia and London, will be required to vote on the demerger - code-named Project River - before June.

The new group will take a primary listing on the ASX, and a secondary listing in South Africa.

NSW coal has been one of the big unknowns in the demerger led by Goldman Sachs - and BHP's management were agonising over whether to spin the assets off.

By dumping plans to include nickel in the spin-off, BHP has sent a clear signal that Nickel West is too troublesome an asset to muddy the demerger process. The business has been on the market for months but has failed to attract a figure within cooee of BHP's $800 million valuation.

Nickel West includes include the Mount Keith, Cliffs and Leinster mines and concentrators, Kalgoorlie smelter, Kambalda concentrator and Kwinana refinery.

"Nickel West is not in because it has that environmental liability (of up to $2 billion) and ultimately BHP will take a price that ensures complete disposal," Mr Lawcock says.

But the spin-off will include BHP's other main nickel asset: Cerro Matoso in Colombia.

The line-up also includes energy, coal and aluminium assets in South Africa, and bauxite, manganese and alumina in Australia.

The new company includes most of the assets that fall outside the four key commodity "pillars" Andrew Mackenzie is championing: iron ore, petroleum, copper and coal. Potash is a possible fifth pillar.

Hi Lucas,

I think we discussed it in order to clarify that it is only pages 7 to 15 of the attachment from the OIC that they are proposing to release.

On this understanding, the Office of the Premier has no concerns about the release of those pages (7 to 15).

Kind regards,

Anna

Anna,

Regarding the below matter, I have a vague recollection of discussing this matter briefly with you but I can find no record indicating whether or not your Office would have a concern with release of the information in issue.

Can you please advise of any concerns or no concerns as soon as possible.

Anna,

I refer to the RTI application by Queensland Nickel RTIP104 which has proceeded to external review with the Office of the Information Commissioner (OIC).

This matter was originally for access to:

"Any documents or correspondence about or concerning 1) any discussions or meetings with Hedley Thomas, or 2) any discussions or directions regarding the Queensland Nickel tailings dam at Yabulu.

Time period / date range for request: 29 April 2014 to 14 May 2014.

Type of documents requested: All."

In dealing with this matter you provided me with some documents which I considered to be out of scope of the application.

These documents (attached) have been provided to the OIC as part of the review process and the OIC's preliminary view (attached) is that these documents are in scope and should be released to the applicant subject to some personal information of third parties being removed.

To that end, can you advise if your Office wishes to make any challenge to this preliminary view of the OIC or if your Office is prepared to release these documents (once edited) to the applicant.

Your earliest response would be appreciated, in any event, could I ask for a reply by 14 August 2014 at the very latest.

Regards

Dear Anna,

The Office of the Premier has received a new Right to Information (RTI) Access Application from Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd seeking access to:

Application Scope

Time period / date range for request: 28 May 2014 to 29 July 2014.

Can you please arrange for a thorough Document Search to be undertaken for all documents held by your Office that relate to the scope of this application.

*A document includes: Books, reports, agency publications, letters, memos, faxes, printed e-mails, draft documents (including rough notes and edited copies), business cards, "With Compliments" slips, "Post-it" notes, maps, plans, charts, drawings, photos, diaries, timesheets, log books, call sheets, forms, applications, coded records, shorthand, mobile telephone SMS messages, electronic records on hard drive, back-up tapes, disks or CD's, unprinted e-mails, microfilm/microfiche records, films, videos, audiotapes, scientific instrument printouts.

While the RTI and Privacy Unit have detailed knowledge of the RTI process, your Office holds the detailed knowledge of the subject matter. It is important that if staff are aware of any concerns about the release of information that these concerns are conveyed to this RTI and Privacy Unit, at the time the documents are supplied, which will assist in an informed decision being made.

Once the documents search is completed, can you please print this email, complete the below declaration and provide the collated documents by COB 8 August 2014 to the RTI and Privacy Unit, Level 1, Executive Building.

Palmer MP calls for state split

Date

August 12, 2014 - 3:15PM

Amy Remeikis

The Queensland Palmer United Party has splits on the mind – one day after Alex Douglas resigned from the party, its sole remaining state MP has called for north Queensland to be made its own state.

Carl Judge, who, as the only remaining PUP MP was named leader of the party by federal leader Clive Palmer after Alex Douglas resigned on Monday, said creating a separate state for north Queensland “would be a major policy of the Palmer United Party going in to the next state election.”

“The Palmer United Party believes there would be significant advantages to North Queensland’s self-government,” he said in a statement.

“The region has long been neglected by both the state and federal governments, yet it continues to act as a major economic centre and contributor to the Australian economy.”

Dividing the state would also remove Mr Palmer’s Townsville nickel refinery from the Queensland government’s scope of influence, but Mr Judge said north Queensland had the “industry and economic viability to be recognised as Australia’s official seventh state”.

“Boundaries and the state capital are all decisions North Queenslanders would have to decide upon should the Palmer United Party be successful at the next state election,” Mr Judge said.

“The Palmer United Party would work closely with the region’s local governments to ensure the best outcome for businesses and residents.”

The idea of splitting Queensland into separate states is often thrown up for discussion. Kennedy MP Bob Katter called for it, almost exactly four years ago, to save the region from “the tyranny” of the south-east’s population majority, which he said would lead to economic ruin.

Mr Katter had the support of delegates at the North Queensland Local Government Association meeting in July 2010, with 98 of the 100 delegates voting in favour of separation.

Dividing the state has also been used as a solution to Queensland’s daylight saving problem, with supporters of the time difference predominately living in the south-east.

Splitting the state into two different time zones has also been suggested, an idea Premier Campbell Newman nixed earlier this year.

“Surely isn’t that the first step to just cutting our state in half? I don’t think we should do that,” he said in January. Mr Judge’s policy announcement came just hours after Dr Douglas claimed there had been “no formal state party structure” for him to follow as leader for the past 15 months, “and no commitment for policy formation despite Mr Judge and I asking on many occasions”.

“Mr Palmer actively sought to prevent the formation of policy,” Dr Douglas said.

But splitting the state is an idea Mr Palmer wholeheartedly supports, with it forming part of his own policy platform during his federal campaign in September last year.

Clive Palmer hits out at Premier for unemployment rate

Date

August 8, 2014 - 11:18AM

Amy Remeikis

Clive Palmer's focus remains on Campbell Newman and Queensland, with the federal MP singling out the state's premier for the rising unemployment rate.

In a release sent out on Friday morning, almost 24 hours after the July unemployment figures were released, Mr Palmer said Mr Newman was to blame for the seasonally adjusted jobless rate hitting 6.8 per cent, the highest rate since June 2003.

Treasurer Tim Nicholls and the government had taken a different view, pointing to the number of resource projects moving from construction to production, which requires less workers.

Mr Nicholls has been warning of the changes in the resource sector, one of the state's 'four pillars' and a sector responsible for a range of flow-on employment, for months.

But Mr Palmer said Mr Newman had "destroyed domestic demand resulting in businesses downsizing and shutting their doors".

Mid-last year, Mr Newman was asking Mr Palmer to "guarantee" jobs at his Townsville nickel refinery plant and give job security to those working at his Sunshine Coast resort.

The tit-for-tat continued in the media until earlier this year when Mr Palmer announced defamation action against Mr Newman, later adding deputy premier Jeff Seeney to his defamation list. Mr Newman has since returned to a policy of not commenting on Mr Palmer.

The government committed to a 4 per cent unemployment rate in six years at the 2012 election.

Mr Nicholls, who has since called the number a "stretch target" said the government remained committed to achieving it.

Anna,

I refer to the RTI application by Queensland Nickel RTIP104 which has proceeded to external review with the Office of the Information Commissioner (OIC).

This matter was originally for access to:

"Any documents or correspondence about or concerning 1) any discussions or meetings with Hedley Thomas, or 2) any discussions or directions regarding the Queensland Nickel tailings dam at Yabulu.

Time period / date range for request: 29 April 2014 to 14 May 2014.

Type of documents requested: All."

In dealing with this matter you provided me with some documents which I considered to be out of scope of the application.

These documents (attached) have been provided to the OIC as part of the review process and the OIC's preliminary view (attached) is that these documents are in scope and should be released to the applicant subject to some personal information of third parties being removed.

To that end, can you advise if your Office wishes to make any challenge to this preliminary view of the OIC or if your Office is prepared to release these documents (once edited) to the applicant.

Your earliest response would be appreciated, in any event, could I ask for a reply by 14 August 2014 at the very latest.

Regards

Dear Mr Clarke

External review of decision under the Right to Information Act 2009
Applicant: Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd

I refer to your telephone conversation with Ms Jodie Ashcroft of the Office of the Information Commissioner (OIC) yesterday.

In your email of 11 July 2014, you provided OIC with a copy of the relevant search records for Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd's (QN) access application, including documents located in response to the searches which you considered are not relevant to the scope of QN's access application. As Ms Ashcroft advised, it is OIC's preliminary view¹ that nine pages² are relevant to the access application. Reasons for OIC's view are set out below.

Relevant documents

As you are aware, QN sought access to:

Any documents or correspondence about or concerning 1) any discussions or meetings with Hedley Thomas, or 2) any discussions or directions regarding the Queensland Nickel tailings dam at Yabulu.

Date range: 29 April 2014 to 14 May 2014

The nine pages OIC considers are relevant to the access application comprise an email chain regarding complaints received by members of the public and the proposed response to that complaint. The first email in the email chain is provided by the Premier to the Department of the Premier and Cabinet as an example of the type of complaints received; it relates to the Environmental Authority issued to QN's nickel refinery and the refinery's discharge of waste into a World Heritage Area, and references a report by the Federal Government. The email chain relates to the proposed response to those complaints. It is my understanding that, although the Queensland Nickel tailings dam at Yabulu is not specifically mentioned, the issues raised in the complaint directly relate to that dam and, therefore, in my view can be considered as 'regarding' the dam as per the access application. This is reinforced by the draft response prepared by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection which specifically references Queensland Nickel tailings dam.³

² Pages 7 to 15 of the pdf titled 'Located Documents' attached to your email of 11 July 2014.

Although the earlier emails in the email chain predate the requested date range, the later emails fall within the requested date range. For this reason, it is OIC's view that the entire email chain is captured.

On the basis of the above, it is OIC's view that the documents are relevant to the scope of the access application and should be disclosed to QN subject to the deletion of personal information, discussed below.

Personal information

In OIC's view, disclosure of the personal information of the complainant, ie his name and email address, would, on balance, be contrary to the public interest and may be deleted in accordance with section 75 of the Right to Information Act 2009 (Qld). At this stage, I do not consider that there are any grounds for refusing access to the remaining information.

Post-it note

There appears to be a post-it note affixed to a copy of the first page of the email chain, however, the image of the post-it note provided to OIC is unreadable. Please provide a copy of the post-it note to OIC with the content visible so that OIC may assess it for relevance to the access application. If the Office of the Premier is of the view that access to the information in the post-it note may be refused, please provide corresponding submissions to OIC.

Next steps

Please advise OIC in writing by 15 August 2014 whether the Office of the Premier accepts this preliminary view. If the Office of the Premier does not accept this preliminary view, please provide submissions in support of its case by 15 August 2014.

If you have any questions, you can contact OIC by writing to the above address, emailing administration@oic.qld.gov.au or telephoning Ms Jodie Ashcroft, Review Officer, on 07 3405 1111.

Thank you for your ongoing assistance in this review.

Yours sincerely

K Shepherd
Assistant Information Commissioner

Anna,

The Office of the Information Commissioner (OIC) is conducting an external review of my decision for RTIP77 on the basis of sufficiency of search.

They have called me today and advised that for the most part they are satisfied with the efforts of the Office of the Premier in capturing all relevant documents for this application.

However, the OIC has ask me to go back and ask Aaron Wakely if there was any subsequent correspondence with Hedley Thomas in response to the attached email.

Could you please undertake further enquiries with Aaron (or give me the green light to ask him directly) and see if there was any additional correspondence (most likely in Aarons email account.

Your earliest response would be appreciated.

Newman calls Palmer on claims of ministerial corruption

CLIVE Palmer claims to be in possession of evidence that "illegal payments" are being made to "corrupt" ministers of Queensland's Newman government. The assertions have baffled Liberal National Party ministers and Premier Campbell Newman, whose government is being targeted by Mr Palmer after refusing to yield to the tycoon's demands to help his companies develop coal reserves. The government called on Mr Palmer to: "Put up or shut up." "Mr Palmer has been coming up with wild conspiracy theories and making unsubstantiated allegations against the Queensland government for more than a year, and has always failed to back up his claims," a spokesman said. "If Mr Palmer does have evidence of illegal activity, as he claims, he should do the right thing and immediately provide the relevant authorities. Put up or shut up." It is understood that Mr Palmer has provided neither evidence nor a complaint to the Crime and Misconduct Commission or to police. In comments transcribed but not broadcast by ABC TV's Australian Story, Mr Palmer said his "evidence" would be shown before the next state election, due in 18 months. "But it is true that there are corrupt ministers in the Newman government," he said. "It is true that we've got the evidence of that, which will come out before the next state election." "It is true that there is (sic) illegal payments being made, that there are favours being done which are not in the best interest of Queensland, that we've got documentary evidence of that." Under Section 133 of the Criminal Code of Queensland it is an indictable offence, carrying a penalty of up to three years' jail, to withhold evidence of a criminal act in exchange for a benefit. In response to questions from The Australian yesterday, Mr Palmer, who has previously made false claims about his earnings, academic qualifications, business record, legal success and wealth, did not repeat his assertions that Newman government ministers were receiving illegal payments. Asked if he was withholding evidence of a serious crime, the leader of the Palmer United Party, which has won the balance of power in the federal parliament with three Senate seats, replied: "Wait to the state election." Mr Palmer -- whose run for the Sunshine Coast seat of Fairfax is subject to a recount -- has pledged to run candidates in the state election in a bid to destroy the Newman government, which was previously a major beneficiary of his donations. The relationship fell apart after Mr Palmer's Galilee Basin coalmining aspirations were set back by a government decision to favour a rival company. "Our point is decisions have not, and are not being, made for the good government of Queensland but for commercial purposes, against the obligation of ministers to make decisions in the interest of the state," he said yesterday. "I (am) not withholding anything. Anyone can make a complaint to police. In my judgment, based on the Fitzgerald inquiry, ministers only act for commercial (reasons) against the public interest if they are being corruptly paid. That's my opinion."The Australian Story program's full interview with Mr Palmer was not broadcast but a transcript of 10,000 words has been made available. Mr Palmer says in the transcript: "Well, I don't say I'm a billionaire! I've never said that. I've never said I've got any money. I just don't comment on myself, my business; why should I?" His claim is contradicted by his repeated assertions about his assets and wealth, including a claim he made earlier this year in response to questioning by The Australian that he earns $500 million a year in royalties from Chinese company CITIC Pacific. The claim was immediately rejected as false by CITIC, which is embroiled in Supreme Court litigation over Mr Palmer's royalty demands for the mining by CITIC of iron ore reserves in the Pilbara in Western Australia. Mr Palmer has launched Supreme Court defamation proceedings against The Australian over four articles. In the Australian Story transcript, however, he thanks the newspaper for the coverage he insists helped him garner votes in the election last month. - See more at: <http://www.theaustralian.com.au/national-affairs/state-politics/newman-calls-palmer-on-claims/story-e6frgczx-1226735730914#sthash.EvMbVyI6.dpuf>

Hi Lucas,

Aaron and I searched his outlook e-mail account together, including his archive. We identified the original e-mail, right clicked "find-related" and selected both options "messages in this conversation" and "messages from the sender". Both searches returned nil e-mails.

We also did a text search of the words "Hedley Thomas" with the only resulting e-mail being the one already provided (dated 20/10/2013).

Subject: RTIP77ER Request for further information from the Office of the Information Commissioner

Anna,

The Office of the Information Commissioner (OIC) is conducting an external review of my decision for RTIP77 on the basis of sufficiency of search.

They have called me today and advised that for the most part they are satisfied with the efforts of the Office of the Premier in capturing all relevant documents for this application.

However, the OIC has asked me to go back and ask Aaron Wakely if there was any subsequent correspondence with Hedley Thomas in response to the attached email.

Could you please undertake further enquiries with Aaron (or give me the green light to ask him directly) and see if there was any additional correspondence (most likely in Aaron's email account).

Your earliest response would be appreciated.

When you issued Clive Palmer's nickel refinery a new permit, you led the public to believe that you were acting in the best interest of the environment and the Great Barrier Reef World Heritage Area. Now, it's clear you weakened protections, by allowing waste of higher toxicity and approving two creek mouths as discharge points.

It doesn't matter that the permit "provides clear, unambiguous, enforceable conditions that must be met." The conditions are so weak that the refinery's discharges of toxic sludge this week are unlikely to even breach these limits.

According to the report by the The Australian, Federal government scientists have described a major discharge from the dams to the ecosystem of Halifax Bay as "similar to the daily discharge of treated sewage from a city of seven million people". How can you possibly allow this to happen in our World Heritage Area.

Dear [Salutation]

Thank you for your recent email concerning the new Environmental Authority (EA) for the Yabulu Nickel Refinery (the refinery). The Minister for Environment and Heritage Protection has asked me to respond on his behalf.

The new EA for the refinery is an important step forward in environmental regulation for the site. The EA sets specific enforceable conditions in relation to releases that significantly raise the environmental performance of the refinery. To suggest otherwise demonstrates a serious lack of understanding of the new EA.

The Australian's recent article "Palmer gets nod for more toxic sludge" (17 April 2014), is not accurate.

The Queensland Government is not permitting Queensland Nickel to discharge "toxic sludge". Queensland Nickel's new EA allows for water releases provided the water meets stipulated release limits.

Queensland Nickel's new EA, issued in November 2013, represents a significant improvement over its old EA in terms of the refinery's required environmental performance. Some of the critical differences between the new and old EAs include:

- The new EA significantly improves stormwater management practices and imposes stringent quality criteria for stormwater that can be released. These criteria were scientifically assessed and are consistent with the philosophy and intent of Australian and New Zealand Environment and Conservation Council (ANZECC) and Agriculture and Resource Management Council of Australia and New Zealand (ARMCANZ) water quality guidelines and the Queensland Environmental Protection (Water) Policy 2009.
- The compliance points for water discharges are different between the old and the new EA. The new EA sets specific standards for water releases at the mouth of Alick and Blind Creeks, within the refinery boundary, that will ensure that beyond the mouths of Alick and Blind Creeks water quality will meet the accepted water quality objectives for Halifax Bay.
- Within the Alick Creek and Blind Creek systems, which have been historically impacted, the new EA requires Queensland Nickel to meet standards that will ensure that onsite, the water quality will be maintained or improved. For example:

- For ammonia, the maximum limit is 18mg/L with a long term median of 1.7mg/L at the discharge point. The old permit required that 2mg/L of ammonia be achieved beyond the refinery boundary.
- For cobalt and nickel respectively, 0.15mg/l and 0.56mg/L is required to be met at the discharge point that is on the refinery premises, while the old EA required 1mg/L for both cobalt and nickel beyond the refinery boundary.
- The new EA includes a discharge standard for lead and chromium, which was not stipulated in the old EA.
- The new EA requires a receiving water monitoring program, event based and routine monitoring at release points and a detailed groundwater monitoring program to be implemented, ensuring the refinery's long-term environmental impacts are continually assessed. These were not a part of the old EA.
- The new EA sets enforceable limits on the refinery discharging water via its ocean outfall pipeline. The old EA gave no stipulation for discharge water quality via the ocean outfall. Joint state and commonwealth approvals are also required for the refinery to use the ocean outfall and, to date, approvals have not been granted.
- The new EA stipulates new requirements around the design, construction and operation of all regulated structures on the site and brings the site in line with the requirements for other regulated dams, including tailings dams, in Queensland.
- The new EA includes a requirement for an annual dam safety inspection by a registered engineer to ensure that any safety issues with the dams are quickly identified and fixed. This was not a requirement of the old EA.
- The new EA contains requirements for ambient air quality monitoring and a range of new limits to protect nearby communities, including for particulates and metals such as nickel within those communities. This was not a requirement of the old EA.

In relation to the report by The Australian stating "Federal government scientists have described a major discharge from the dams to the ecosystem of Halifax Bay in the World Heritage Area as "similar to the daily discharge of treated sewage from a city of seven million people", this information was obtained under a Right to Information request to the Great Barrier Reef Marine Park Authority and was taken out of context. The Queensland Nickel tailings dam is a significant size, however the above statement assumes that most tailings and water are lost from the tailings storage facility for such impact to occur. This would mean a catastrophic failure of the dam. This is neither what is authorised through the EA nor what has occurred recently.

Overall, regulated dams at the refinery, including the tailings storage facility, do contain high levels of contaminants, which is why these contaminants are contained within regulated structures, which must be designed and certified by engineers.

As highlighted above, the new EA stipulates requirements around the design, construction and operation of all regulated structures. These are the same as for other tailings dams in Queensland and are in accordance with the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection's guideline for 'Structures which are dams or levees constructed as part of environmentally relevant activities' and the 'Manual for Assessing Hazard Categories and Hydraulic Performance of Dams'.

The new EA under which Queensland Nickel is required to operate at Yabulu, clearly illustrates the Queensland Government's ongoing commitment to ensuring the refinery's operations continue to meet strict environmental safeguards.

The Minister hopes this information is of assistance to you. Should you have any further enquiries, please contact Mrs Ingrid Fomiatti Minnesma, Regional Manager, Environmental Services and Regulation of the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection on telephone (07) 4222 5337.

Yours sincerely

Dear Sue / Lisa / Anna,

I refer to the four Right to Information applications by Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd seeking access to:

"Copies of all documents and correspondence relating to the following:

- 1. The Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd (QN) approved Transitional Environmental Program, known as "TEP MAN16200"*
- 2. The letter from the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd dated 27 June 2013*
- 3. The Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd "Transitional Environmental Program (MAN16200)" "Transitional Environmental Program Final Completion Report" dated 13 December 2013, and*
- 4. The Penalty Infringement Notice Q40010458, issued by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd dated 21 January 2014."*

These files were departmental applications RTID214ER and RTID215ER; and Office of the Premier Files RTIP88ER and RTIP89ER all of which proceeded to external review with the Office of the Information Commissioner (OIC) on the basis of "sufficiency of search".

The OIC has just written to advise this Office that all four matters have now been finalised, with the applicant not making any further submissions to challenge the sufficiency of the searches undertaken in the processing of these applications.

While these four matters are technically recorded as "informal resolution", I am chalking these up as the original decision by this Office being "Upheld".

Submitted for your information.

Radioactive waste fears if Qld mines open

• BY CLEO FRASER AAP AUGUST 01, 2014 3:25PM

QUEENSLAND could be dotted with hidden deposits of low level radioactive waste if uranium was once again mined in the state, environmentalists have warned.

THE Newman coalition government has announced it's ready to accept applications for uranium mining projects after ending a long-standing "ideological" ban imposed by the then-Labor regime in the 1980s.

The state's reserves are estimated to be worth up to $18 billion, with most of that sourced in Queensland's northwest, although green groups dispute the figures.

Mines Minister Andrew Cripps says uranium mining will be subject to a robust framework to ensure future mines meet the world's best practice on environmental protection and safety standards.

Australian Conservation Foundation nuclear campaigner Dave Sweeney warned uranium mining had long lasting environmental impacts.

"You've got large levels of radioactive waste which are kept in tailings dams which, at the end of the operation, are covered with a layer of clay and rock," he said.

He also points to uranium prices, saying the market was "absolutely shredded" after the 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster in Japan.

"This is the worst time imaginable on a strictly economic basis to be giving the green light," he said.

Queensland Resources Council chief executive Michael Roche estimates valued reserves at about $18 billion - which is higher than the government's estimate of $10 billion - with demand for nuclear energy was set to rise over the next two decades.

"Contrary to activist propaganda, the state government and industry have worked together with other major stakeholders to deliver world's best environmental protection and safety standards," he said.

The Association of Mining and Exploration Companies said it would be some time before new mines are opened "given the current economic conditions".

"But the Queensland government is at least opening the door for new opportunities to stimulate the industry."

Australian Greens Senator Larissa Waters says mining uranium makes no economic or environmental sense and threatens the health of Queenslanders.

"Uranium mining also threatens farms, groundwater, soil and local wildlife," she said.

The uranium will be exported through existing licensed ports in Darwin and South Australia.

Green groups claim it will only be a matter of time before it is shipped across the Great Barrier Reef.

Mr Cripps says there are "no plans" for this to happen.

Under a new framework, applications for uranium mining will be assessed by the Queensland coordinator-general, with environmental assessments and approvals to be jointly completed by the Queensland and federal governments.

URANIUM MINING IN QUEENSLAND

- * The Newman government estimates the state's reserves are worth about $10 billion, while the resource sector puts this figure at $18b
 - * Green groups claim demand for the mineral has been in decline for several years
 - * In Queensland, there are known deposits inland from Cairns, near Townsville and in the northwest
 - * Uranium mining was banned in Queensland by the then Labor government in 1989, but it hasn't been mined since 1982
 - * Uranium is mined in South Australia and the Northern Territory
 - * It is mildly radioactive and used to fuel nuclear power reactors and weapons, as well as medical and scientific research
 - * Australia mines 16 per cent of the world's uranium. Other major producers are Kazakhstan and Canada.

IMF fears G20 target in trouble

SYDNEY: The G20's pledge to boost growth could be wiped out by rising interest rates and weakening emerging economies, an IMF report said, as chief Christine Lagarde warned yesterday of "slow" progress in reaching the goal.

Ms Lagarde said there was uncertainty over whether the group of 20 leading economies had the will to meet their 2 per cent additional growth target, which they agreed to at a meeting in February in Sydney.

"I am not going to point the finger at any of the members but ... it has been slow in the making that's for sure," the International Monetary Fund's managing director told The Australian Financial Review.

"There is a lot of pressure on finance ministers to come up with actual measures."

The IMF said in its report that changing growth patterns could slow global growth by as much as 2 per cent - the same figure the G20 countries had vowed to lift their economies by over the next five years.

Interest rates were expected to rise in advanced nations, particularly the US and Britain, as they see improving economic growth, the IMF said.

Emerging market nations are also "slowing in a synchronised and protracted manner", and the two risks when combined could "be damaging for the global economy".

Brand Australia: Forrest urges a united approach to China

Print: The Australian, Australia, General News, Andrew Burrell
01 Aug 2014
305 words

BILLIONAIRE Andrew Forrest has brokered a "historic" agreement among Australia's most senior agricultural leaders for the industry to market itself to China as one united brand under a single national logo.

At the first meeting of the magnate's new Sino-Australia agricultural partnership, known as ASA 100, business chiefs and federal and state ministers agreed that a joint gathering with their Chinese counterparts would be held in Brisbane before the G20 forum in November.

Mr Forrest wants companies and governments to work together as a single Australian brand to promote the national interest, boost efficiencies and streamline investment, in a bid to meet China's soaring demand for highquality food.

The idea for a 100-year partnership between Australia and China was developed several years ago but was crystallised at a meeting between Mr Forrest and Chinese Premier Li Keqiang in Beijing in April.

The ASA 100 will comprise 50 members from each country who will meet annually.

Mr Forrest told The Australian that a well-known meat producer had told him after yesterday's meeting in Sydney that he had never seen so many people from Australia's agricultural industry in one room. "He also said he had never seen everyone reach an agreement like they did yesterday," he said.

The meeting was attended by dozens of industry leaders including Goodman Fielder's Chris Delaney, Meat & Livestock Australia's Richard Norton, Wesfarmers commercial director Ian McLeod, AACo's Jason Strong and Competitive Foods' Jack Cowin.

It was chaired by Business Council of Australia chief executive Jennifer Westacott.

Trade Minister Andrew Robb said he welcomed any constructive effort to promote the interests of Australian agriculture and to deepen trade and investment ties with China.

"Agriculture is one of our great strengths and we have an enviable and growing reputation for 'clean, green and healthy' produce," he said. "We should look to leverage the premium, 'brand Australia' at every opportunity.

I have subsequently obtain from the applicant a copy of "the letter" and "the notice" and have attached copies of these documents to assist in your search.

Can you please arrange for a thorough Document Search to be undertaken for all documents held by your Office that relate to the scope of this application.

The RTI and Privacy Unit rely on the staff of the Office of the Premier to identify ALL relevant documents for an RTI application. This will include documents and files that relate to the subject matter, as well as any other documents not held on a centralised filing system, such as emails and hard copy documents.

The process of gathering relevant documents may require you to conduct extensive searches of the Office email system as well as searches for hard copy documents.

When providing copies of relevant documents, it is important for you to review the supplied documents and ensure that all attachments to these documents are also supplied (if in doubt, please contact this Office).

While the RTI and Privacy Unit have detailed knowledge of the RTI process, your Office holds the detailed knowledge of the subject matter. It is important that if staff are aware of any concerns about the release of information that these concerns are conveyed to this RTI and Privacy Unit, at the time the documents are supplied, which will assist in an informed decision being made.

Once the documents search is completed, can you please print this email, complete the below declaration and provide the collated documents by COB 4 August 2014 to the RTI and Privacy Unit, Level 1, Executive Building.

Can you please arrange for a thorough Document Search to be undertaken for all documents held by your Office that relate to the scope of this application.

In this instance, I consider that verbal enquiries within your Office may be the best starting point, in order to identify which, if any, staff may hold relevant information.

*A document includes: Books, reports, agency publications, letters, memos, faxes, printed e-mails, draft documents (including rough notes and edited copies), business cards, "With Compliments" slips, "Post-it" notes, maps, plans, charts, drawings, photos, diaries, timesheets, log books, call sheets, forms, applications, coded records, shorthand, mobile telephone SMS messages, electronic records on hard drive, back-up tapes, disks or CD's, unprinted e-mails, microfilm/microfiche records, films, videos, audiotapes, scientific instrument printouts.

This will include documents and files that relate to the subject matter, as well as any other documents not held on a centralised filing system, such as emails and hard copy documents.

The process of gathering relevant documents may require you to conduct extensive searches of the Office email system as well as searches for hard copy documents.

When providing copies of relevant documents, it is important for you to review the supplied documents and ensure that all attachments to these documents are also supplied (if in doubt, please contact this Office).

While the RTI and Privacy Unit have detailed knowledge of the RTI process, your Office holds the detailed knowledge of the subject matter. It is important that if staff are aware of any concerns about the release of information that these concerns are conveyed to this RTI and Privacy Unit, at the time the documents are supplied, which will assist in an informed decision being made.

I have subsequently obtain from the applicant a copy of "the letter" and "the notice" and have attached copies of these documents to assist in your search.

Can you please arrange for a thorough Document Search to be undertaken for all documents held by your Office that relate to the scope of this application.

In this instance, I consider that verbal enquiries within your Office may be the best starting point, in order to identify which, if any, staff may hold relevant information.

*A document includes: Books, reports, agency publications, letters, memos, faxes, printed e-mails, draft documents (including rough notes and edited copies), business cards, "With Compliments" slips, "Post-it" notes, maps, plans, charts, drawings, photos, diaries, timesheets, log books, call sheets, forms, applications, coded records, shorthand, mobile telephone SMS messages, electronic records on hard drive, back-up tapes, disks or CD's, unprinted e-mails, microfilm/microfiche records, films, videos, audiotapes, scientific instrument printouts.

The RTI and Privacy Unit rely on the staff of the Office of the Premier to identify ALL relevant documents for an RTI application. This will include documents and files that relate to the subject matter, as well as any other documents not held on a centralised filing system, such as emails and hard copy documents.

The process of gathering relevant documents may require you to conduct extensive searches of the Office email system as well as searches for hard copy documents.

When providing copies of relevant documents, it is important for you to review the supplied documents and ensure that all attachments to these documents are also supplied (if in doubt, please contact this Office).

While the RTI and Privacy Unit have detailed knowledge of the RTI process, your Office holds the detailed knowledge of the subject matter. It is important that if staff are aware of any concerns about the release of information that these concerns are conveyed to this RTI and Privacy Unit, at the time the documents are supplied, which will assist in an informed decision being made.

Once the documents search is completed, can you please print this email, complete the below declaration and provide the collated documents by COB 4 August 2014 to the RTI and Privacy Unit, Level 1, Executive Building.

Deputy Premier Jeff Seeney said Mr Palmer needed to explain why he had resigned from the companies and why he hadn't told the public nor made a statement in the Parliament.

"These are companies that have been at the very heart of Mr Palmer's business empire" he said.

"Is he trying to distance himself from these companies now and if so why?"

"Does this have anything to do with the serious allegations levelled against Mr Palmer in the Federal Court by his Chinese business partners?"

"Or is it because of the environmental issues at the Townsville nickel refinery?"

"And what does this mean for workers in Townsville and at the Coolon resort? Are their jobs secure?"

"Mr Palmer can't keep brushing off the serious questions being asked about his business activities. It's time he came clean and told the people of Australia what's really going on."

- 1) the letter sent by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd, dated 17 June 2014;*
- 2) the letter sent by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd, dated 30 June 2014 (ref: 0027-2014);*
- 3) the section 465 notice sent by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd, dated 17 June 2014;*
- 4) the section 465 notice sent by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd, dated 30 June 2014 (ref: 0027-2014);*
- 5) the interview of the Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd company representative in relation to the s.465 notice sent to Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd, dated either 17 June 2014 or 30 June 2014 (ref: 0027-2014); and*
- 6) the Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd investigation by the Department of Environment and Heritage Protection.*

Excluding all documents sent to or received by Queensland Nickel Pty Ltd, Clive Palmer, or any of their employees or legal advisers.

Time period / date range for request: 1 April 2014 to 24 July 2014."

I have subsequently obtain from the applicant a copy of "the letter" and "the notice" and have attached copies of these documents to assist in your search.

Can you please arrange for a thorough Document Search to be undertaken for all documents held by your Office that relate to the scope of this application.

In this instance, I consider that verbal enquiries within your Office may be the best starting point, in order to identify which, if any, staff may hold relevant information.

*A document includes: Books, reports, agency publications, letters, memos, faxes, printed e-mails, draft documents (including rough notes and edited copies), business cards, "With Compliments" slips, "Post-it" notes, maps, plans, charts, drawings, photos, diaries, timesheets, log books, call sheets, forms, applications, coded records, shorthand, mobile telephone SMS messages, electronic records on hard drive, back-up tapes, disks or CD's, unprinted e-mails, microfilm/microfiche records, films, videos, audiotapes, scientific instrument printouts.

The RTI and Privacy Unit rely on the staff of the Office of the Premier to identify ALL relevant documents for an RTI application. This will include documents and files that relate to the subject matter, as well as any other documents not held on a centralised filing system, such as emails and hard copy documents.

The process of gathering relevant documents may require you to conduct extensive searches of the Office email system as well as searches for hard copy documents.

When providing copies of relevant documents, it is important for you to review the supplied documents and ensure that all attachments to these documents are also supplied (if in doubt, please contact this Office).

While the RTI and Privacy Unit have detailed knowledge of the RTI process, your Office holds the detailed knowledge of the subject matter. It is important that if staff are aware of any concerns about the release of information that these concerns are conveyed to this RTI and Privacy Unit, at the time the documents are supplied, which will assist in an informed decision being made.

Once the documents search is completed, can you please print this email, complete the below declaration and provide the collated documents by COB 4 August 2014 to the RTI and Privacy Unit, Level 1, Executive Building.
