612 ABC Mornings with Steve Austin talks to Annastacia Palaszczuk on the subject of the activities of Scott Driscoll:

- Concerned wife of an MP benefitting from the public purse – taxpayers money
- Driscoll is 'hiding' and not answering any questions – calls for Driscoll to stand up this week and give a full detailed explanation about what is going on
- Countless allegations about this member. First there were only one or two, but they are now compounding
- Member needs to explain about mates being appointed to the board, public money going to his wife, how his wife came to be employed in the organisations when she apparently had nil qualifications
- Understands that Driscoll's wife was still benefitting, gaining taxpayers money, through a contract that she had through the organisation while she was also employed by the organisation
- Says emails exist where Driscoll's wife has said to 'wipe the computers'
- Believes that the Premier should be referring this situation to the CMC

I think it's because the Commonwealth Coat of Arms is officially used as the logo of the Commonwealth Parliament.

In Queensland the Parliament has its own crest, as does the Legislative Assembly.

I'm not sure MPs are actually restricted from using the Coat of Arms. There are restrictions on use of the corporate logo, which is the crest with Queensland Government printed underneath.

The issue is whether we want to encourage such use. You will recall in Council that Opposition councillors regularly produced misinformation that was made seemingly more legitimate by the appearance of a Council logo.

That being said, the Commonwealth has strict rules about the placement and use of its coat of arms, including that it not be used alongside images of the flag or political party logos.

The Queensland Parliament may have some rules mandating use of the Legislative Assembly crest on stationery it funds. I recall a decision some years ago to stop using the Parliamentary crest.

This is the first email that was sent. I will send through the one with the proposed release date as well.

Scott is concerned about releasing this at this time, as it does not fit with our local paper's deadline dates, meaning that by the time we send this out it won't be in the paper for another two weeks.

It is imperative for us to fit with our local media's cycle, otherwise we feel it would be pointless for us to release it.
